Annexure I

Guidelines for the new course approval through the Senate

The different Academic Units at the Institute propose new relevant elective courses to strengthen the elective bouquet. The following guidelines to be followed while proposing new courses:

1. The course must be discussed in the Department Faculty Board (DFB) for further processing. The DFB after due consideration may further suggest another discussion with relevant faculty members of other departments, if required;
2. The concerned Department must circulate the proposed content to all other Departments for their input. The Departments must be given at least a time duration of 2 weeks to provide the required inputs. The Heads must provide the feedback of their Department to avoid overlap with existing courses and to modify the content;
3. After receiving the feedback from different Departments, the concerned Department must send the proposed course to subject experts for the review;
4. At least one of the subject experts must have a post Ph.D. teaching experience of more than 10 years' preferably the course should be reviewed by the experts who were involved in the review process of the Departmental program or by the Advisory Board of the Department;
5. Elective Courses must have feedback from industry wherever required; and
6. Based on the reviews the contents of the course must be modified and presented in the Academic Committee for its consideration.

Considering that the above process may require substantial time, the departments are requested to start the process well ahead of the start of a new semester.
